About Sudbury 2019:

Mining and the Environment International Conference

June 23 - 28, 2019, Laurentian University, Sudbury, Ontario, Canada

ABOUT SUDBURY 2019

The first Mining and the Environment International Conference, Sudbury'95, was over 20 years ago, with over 2000 professionals having now attended the SIX (6) conferences in the series. The Sudbury 2019 organizing committee invite you to join us in Sudbury between June 23rd and 28th to participate in the 7th conference of the series.

Building on the successes of the previous Sudbury conferences, the Mining and the Environment International Conference will bring together technical experts in the environmental and environmental health sciences, policy makers and regulators from around the world to address mine, land and waterways rehabilitation and related environmental protection issues.

The conference will be co-hosted by Laurentian University School of the Environment and the Goodman School of Mines, and will be held at Laurentian University in Sudbury, Ontario.

As a key component of the conference, the trade show exhibition will feature many innovative developments and displays relevant to the mining industry including a blend of industry, association and academic exhibits from all aspects of the mining and environmental community.

The exhibition will be fully integrated with the conference activities and in close proximity to the main meeting rooms. Located in the Alumni Hall at Laurentian University, the exhibition area will serve as a meeting place for all coffee breaks, a breakfast and an afternoon social event.
